Your DOST | Parent Talk Series

"Just 5 more minutes!"

They're gaming again. You're worried again. You're not alone.

We asked 100 parents about their child's online gaming. Here's what they shared, and what helped.

94%

worry their child could get hooked on online games

If you've felt this too, you're in good company.

6 in 10

feel frustration at home because of gaming

That doesn't make anyone a bad parent.

1 in 2

feel strain in their bond with their child

And that bond is worth protecting.

Other big worries

Their child's grades	91%
Unsuitable content	88%
Health	83%
Aggressive behaviour	79%

% of parents with medium or high fear

A loop many of us get stuck in

We worry, so we add rules. The fights don't stop, and the worry grows.

Sound familiar?

Worry 94% → More rules 97% → Arguments → Strain in Relationship

More rules didn't mean fewer fights

THE WAY OUT

What helped wasn't more control. It was getting curious.

When parents understand why their child plays, far fewer feel distant from them.

Understand why they play	48% feel strain
Don't understand why	79% feel strain

Try this tonight, just for 10 minutes

Half of parents have never played with their kids. Tonight could be the first time.

- "What do you love about this game?"
- "Can you teach me one level?"
- "What makes it hard to stop sometimes?"

It's not about taking the game away. It's about not losing each other over it.

Talk to a YourDOST expert →

Source: YourDOST survey of 100 parents, 1–3 Dec 2020. Figures are % of the 66 parents whose kids play online games. Links shown are associations, not cause and effect.

Concept for YourDOST by Chethan

Your DOST

Parent Talk Series

"Just 5 more minutes!"

They're gaming again. You're worried again. You're not alone.

We asked 100 parents about their child's online gaming. Here's what they shared, and what helped.

94%

worry their child could get hooked on online games

If you've felt this too, you're in good company.

YourDOST parent survey · 100 parents · Dec 2020

How it feels at home →

HOW IT FEELS AT HOME

6 in 10

feel frustration at home because of gaming

64% of parents

That doesn't make anyone a bad parent.

1 in 2

feel strain in their bond with their child

55% of parents

And that bond is worth protecting.

% of 66 parents whose kids play online games

What else worries parents →

Other big worries

Besides addiction (94%), this is what parents fear most.

Their child's grades — 91%

Unsuitable content — 88%

Health — 83%

Aggressive behaviour — 79%

% of parents with medium or high fear

% of 66 parents whose kids play online games

The loop many get stuck in →

A loop many of us get stuck in

We worry, so we add rules. The fights don't stop, and the worry grows. Sound familiar?

Worry 94%
fear addiction

More rules 97%
say they're needed

Arguments 56%
see them at home

Strain 55%
with their child

More rules didn't mean fewer fights

Homes with the most rules reported no fewer fights.

% of 66 parents whose kids play online games

What actually helped →

THE WAY OUT

What helped wasn't more control. It was getting curious.

When parents understand why their child plays, far fewer feel distant from them.

Understand why they play — 48% feel strain

Don't understand why — 79% feel strain

Try this tonight, just for 10 minutes

Half of parents have never played with their kids. Tonight could be the first time.

- "What do you love about this game?"
- "Can you teach me one level?"
- "What makes it hard to stop sometimes?"

It's not about taking the game away. It's about not losing each other over it.

Talk to a YourDOST expert →

Source: YourDOST survey of 100 parents, 1–3 Dec 2020. Figures are % of the 66 parents whose kids play online games. Links shown are associations, not cause and effect.

Concept for YourDOST by Chethan