Jo Bola Nahi

the things we don't say out loud

Everyone has a default answer. "Theek hoon." "Good, you?" "Haan maa, process mein hai." Each of these ten posts puts the line people say next to the line they don't, one typed and one handwritten, and ends the same way: Bol do. Halka lagega. (Say it. It'll feel lighter.)

3 reels · 3 carousels · 3 statics · 1 story series · 8–24 Nov 2026

Prepared by Chethan N, 7 Nov 2026. A concept for the interview, not content published by YourDOST. Names and numbers inside the creatives are illustrative; every statistic is sourced on the last page. Live version with playable reels: claude.ai artifact "Jo Bola Nahi". Post-ready PNG and MP4 files accompany this PDF.

How I got here

WHAT YOURDOST'S OWN CONTENT TOLD ME

Who they serve	Blog sections: Student Life, Work & Careers, Love & Relationship, Self & Growth. B2B through colleges and companies.	→ Posts for students, employees and couples, plus two for buyers: HR leaders, and founders with their incubators.
How people reach them	Warrior stories: access through a college tie-up, a college subscription, a company benefit, a university email.	→ Student and employee posts say "check your college email" or "ask HR".
How they talk	First-person stories, Hinglish, "Please talk to someone. Don't carry it alone."	→ Same warmth, but each post opens on one specific moment, which works as a hook.
What's missing	Nothing on AI and jobs, festivals, founders or job hunting.	→ Four posts fill those gaps, timed to Diwali, Men's Day and placement season.
What they aren't	"Not a medical service or suicide prevention helpline."	→ Heavier posts carry Tele MANAS 14416 next to the YourDOST CTA.

SIX RULES SO IT DOESN'T SOUND ROBOTIC

Start inside one moment, not a topic.
"I picked up the phone to tell you", not "breakups are hard".

One true, specific detail per post.
11:47 pm. 40 seconds. 92.4%. Application #147.

No clinical words in the hook.
The feeling first; the brand in the last frame or the caption.

The language people think in.
Hinglish for students, couples, families. English for founders and HR.

Ask for something small.
One 🪔, your name, your application count, one question at a 1:1.

Never promise what the product can't.
No "AI won't take your job", no "free" unless confirmed. YourDOST's numbers labelled as theirs.

Poora ghar chamka diya. Andar ka ek kona abhi bhi andhera hai.
Is Diwali, ek diya wahan bhi.

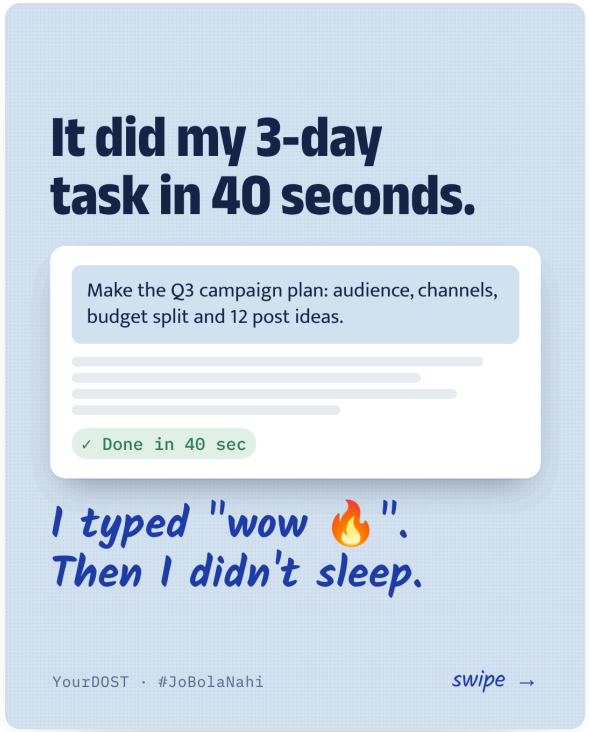

The whole house is shining. One corner inside is still dark. This Diwali, light a diya there too.

Why: Diwali week, every home is deep-cleaning, so the post borrows a ritual people are already doing instead of asking them to stop and think about mental health. A reel, because the turn from bright to dark has to be seen happening.

FOR	Everyone home for Diwali, especially 18–30s back from hostels and first jobs
HOOK	Frame one is a Diwali cleaning checklist: Almirah ✓, Pankhe ✓, Kitchen tiles ✓, Mann ☐. The unticked box is the hook, readable in under a second with the sound off.
ENGAGEMENT	One-emoji comment (🪔). It's the lowest-effort way to say "me too" in public. The team replies to every diya in the first two hours with a real line, not a template. Pin the post for festive week. Add a story "Add Yours" sticker: "Ek diya mere liye".
CAPTION	Is saal kuch cheezein bina bataye bhaari ho gayi. Agar tumhara bhi aisa saal tha, comments mein bas ek 🪔 chhod do. Kuch likhna zaroori nahi. Hum har diya padhenge. Aur agar kisi se baat karni hai, festival ke din bhi, YourDOST ke experts 24×7 hain. Link in bio. #JoBolaNahi #Diwali2026

02 # 40 seconds

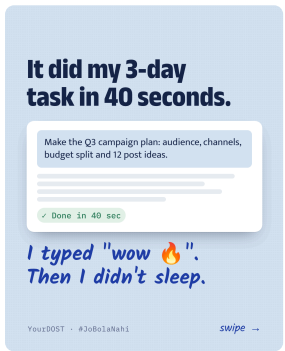

AI and job fear | Carousel · 7 slides | Tue 10 Nov, 9:30 PM

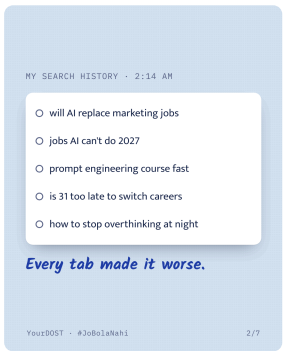

It did my 3-day task in 40 seconds.
I typed "wow 🔥". Then I didn't sleep.

Why: Most AI fear is really fear about self-worth, and a first-person confession reads like a peer, not a brand. A carousel, because each swipe is one more 2 AM thought, the way the spiral actually goes.

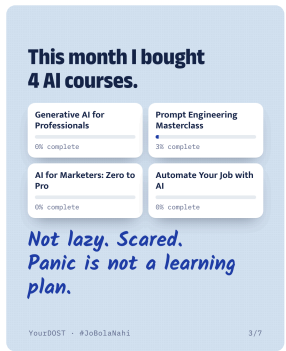

FOR	Working professionals, 24–40, in tech, marketing, design and ops
HOOK	The first line is a confession, not a statistic. The chat card under it proves the 40 seconds, and the handwritten "Then I didn't sleep" is the unsaid half that makes people swipe.
ENGAGEMENT	Send-to-a-colleague. DM shares are the strongest reach signal on Instagram, and "the colleague who's been fine since the town hall" names a real person in the reader's head. Slide 6 is a two-minute exercise, which earns the save.
CAPTION	In a July 2026 Blind survey, 66% of AI and ML professionals in India said they expect layoffs or big headcount cuts in the next 3–6 months. That isn't a "you" problem. That's a lot of people lying awake at 2 AM with 14 tabs open. Slide 6 takes two minutes. Do it tonight. And send this to the colleague who's been saying "it's fine" since the last town hall. #JoBolaNahi #AIanxiety

Marksheet pe percentage bold mein chhapta hai, naam chhote font mein.

Tum ulta yaad rakhna.

On a marksheet the percentage is printed in bold and your name in small font. Remember it the other way round.

Why: Every student has held this marksheet, and the font-size detail is true but nobody has pointed it out. A reel, because the zoom from 92.4% to the tiny name makes the whole argument in three seconds.

FOR	Students: boards, JEE/NEET aspirants, CAT takers. Parents and teachers share it
HOOK	"Kabhi notice kiya?" over a real-looking marksheet, with a red-pen circle around 92.4%. It's an observation every student has seen a hundred times and never noticed, so the eye stops to check.
ENGAGEMENT	"Comment your name". The comments become a wall of names, which is the visual for a follow-up post. Teachers and parents forward it to class and family groups. The college-email line routes students to the access many already have through campus tie-ups.
CAPTION	Boards, JEE, NEET, CAT... season shuru ho gaya hai. Comments mein woh naam likho jisse tumhe log yaad rakhein. Rank nahi. Naam. Ghar ka naam bhi chalega. Hum shuru karte hain: Golu. Pressure bhaari ho raha hai toh kisi se baat karo. Bahut saare colleges students ko YourDOST pehle se dete hain. Apna college email check karo. Abhi bahut mushkil lag raha hai? Breakup · Static image · Sat 14 Nov, 10:30 PM

Aaj kuch funny hua. Tumhe batane ke liye phone uthaya.

Phir yaad aaya.

Something funny happened today. I picked up the phone to tell you. Then I remembered.

Why: A screenshot-style image looks like something a friend would post, so it travels as "literally me". The unsent message is the campaign idea at its simplest: the thing we didn't say.

FOR	College students and young adults, 18–26
HOOK	It looks like a friend's screenshot, not an ad: a chat with "don't.", last seen 11:47 pm, and a message typed but not sent. People recognise the moment before they register the brand.
ENGAGEMENT	Save ("for the night you almost hit send") plus story reshares. The screenshot format gets reposted as "literally me", which carries the post into friend groups the brand can't reach.
CAPTION	Breakup sabse zyada fight mein nahi dukhta. Dukhta hai kisi random Tuesday, 4:15 pm, jab kuch funny hota hai aur jisko batana tha, woh ab tumhara nahi. Yeh reflex jaata hai. Jitna chahte ho usse dheere, jitna sochte ho usse jaldi. Tab tak, drafts mein mat rakho. Kisi se baat karo. YourDOST ke experts raat 2 baje bhi jaage hote hain. Save this for the night you almost hit send. #JoBolaNahi

05 Finally!

Getting back together · Carousel · 6 slides · Mon 16 Nov, 8:30 PM

Wapas saath hain. Sabne bola "finally!"

Kisi ne nahi bataya ki asli kaam patch-up ke baad shuru hota hai.

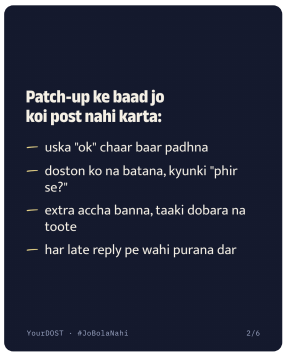

We're back together. Everyone said "finally!" Nobody said the real work starts after the patch-up.

Why: Patch-ups are a gap: plenty of breakup content, almost none for couples who got back together. A carousel, because it carries a small toolkit (three questions) that people save and send.

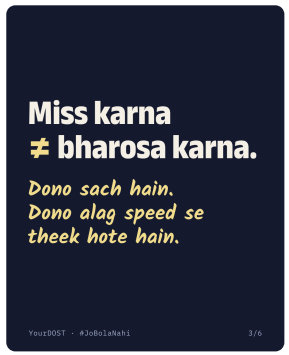

FOR	Young couples, 20–30, who got back together
HOOK	Friends' comments ("finally!!! 🥹❤️", "ab mat ladna dono 😂") set up a happy ending, then the handwritten line undercuts it. The topic itself is the hook: there are endless breakup posts and almost none about patch-ups.
ENGAGEMENT	Send-to-partner (DM share) and save. Slide 5 gives couples three questions to ask each other, a reason to open the conversation that doesn't feel like an accusation.
CAPTION	Breakups pe hazaar posts hain. Patch-ups pe koi nahi. Toh yeh rahi. Agar tum dono wapas saath ho aur phir bhi andar se dar lagta hai, that's normal. It doesn't mean it was a mistake. It means trust is still being rebuilt. Slide 5 is for both of you. Send it to them, or save it for when you're ready. #JoBolaNahi

06 The third number

Founders | Static image + LinkedIn | Wed 18 Nov, 8:30 AM

Runway: 7 months. Sleep: 4 hours. People I can be honest with: 0.

Investors ask about the first number. Who's asking about the third?

Why: Founders read decks all day, so the post speaks their format and ends on the number nobody tracks. It also leads into YourDOST's founders programme, the offering in Q3.

FOR	Founders and early startup teams. Incubators and VCs share it
HOOK	A pitch-deck slide is a founder's native language. "Slide 14/14: Founder health, not in the data room" looks like something they've made themselves, and the red 0 is the confession.
ENGAGEMENT	"What's your third number?" invites a comment or a DM. Cross-post the same day on LinkedIn, where founders and investors actually read. The incubator line and the programme link open the conversation the founders-programme pitch (Q3) needs.
CAPTION	Founders are the only people in the company who can't have a bad day out loud. The team needs morale. Investors need conviction. Family wanted you to take the safe job. So it goes nowhere. If your third number is 0, let's make it 1. YourDOST has an emotional wellness programme built for founders: yourdost.com/emotional-wellness-founders. Or start small with an instant chat with an expert, 24×7, no pitch deck required. Founders: what's your third number? DM it if you'd rather not comment. Incubators and VCs: YourDOST works with portfolio teams too. #JoBolaNahi #FounderMentalHealth

07 12vi baar

International Men's Day | Static image | Thu 19 Nov, 9:00 AM

Is hafte usne 11 baar "theek hoon" bola.

12vi baar poocho. Phir ruko.

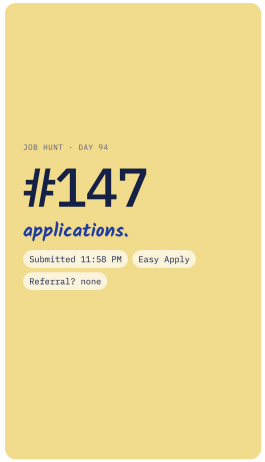

This week he said "I'm fine" 11 times. Ask him a 12th time. Then wait.

Why: Men's Day posts are usually quotes. This one gives people something specific to forward and one small thing to do. A static notebook page, because the list itself is the story.

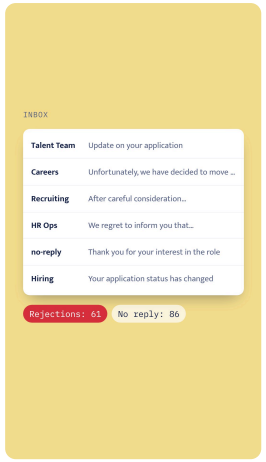

FOR	Men 18–35, and the people who love them: partners, sisters, friends, mothers
HOOK	A notebook page that logs every "theek hoon" with a timestamp, including "Wed 2:10 AM: neend nahi aa rahi, baaki theek". The 2:10 AM entry is where readers stop.
ENGAGEMENT	"Send this to him". The post is built to be forwarded on Men's Day, when people are looking for something to send that isn't a generic quote.
CAPTION	19 November, International Men's Day. Bahut saare ladkon ko sikhaya gaya hai: bike theek karo, bill bhar do, aur jo andar hai woh chupchaap ghar le jao. Aaj usse koi quote mat bhejo. Yeh bhejo. Aur poocho, sach mein kaisa hai. Agar woh tumse nahi bol pa raha, YourDOST ke experts 24×7 hain. "Mard ko dard nahi hota" ki zaroorat nahi. Tele MANAS: 14416, free, 24×7. #JoBolaNahi #InternationalMensDay

Tumhara inbox tumhare baare mein faisla nahi hai.

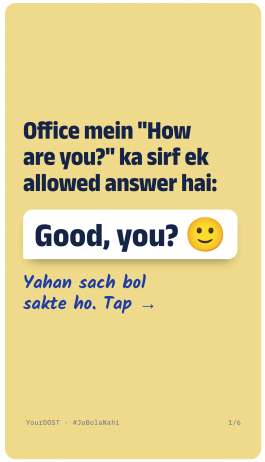

147 applications. 61 rejections. 86 never replied. Your inbox is not a verdict on you.

Why: Job hunting runs on numbers, so the reel counts them up and then lets go of them. "Haan maa, process mein hai" is a line almost everyone in a job hunt has said.

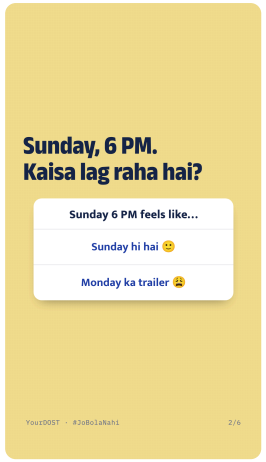

FOR	Freshers in placement season, and people laid off and looking
HOOK	An application counter racing from #001 to #147 in two seconds. Anyone job-hunting knows their own number, and the motion holds the thumb.
ENGAGEMENT	"Comment your application count". Numbers are easy to type, and the thread becomes a solidarity wall. The recruiter line gets shared by HR people, which reaches YourDOST's B2B buyers.
CAPTION	Woh "after careful consideration" wala email? Aksar software bhejta hai, ek saath sau logon ko. Please usse apni teen din ki self-worth mat do. Comments mein apna application count likho. Dikhate hain ki is mein koi akela nahi hai. Recruiters reading this: reply to one candidate you ghosted. Today. #JoBolaNahi #JobHunt

Office mein "How are you?" ka sirf ek allowed answer hai: "Good, you?"

Yahan sach bol sakte ho.

At the office there's only one allowed answer to "How are you?": "Good, you?" Here, you can tell the truth.

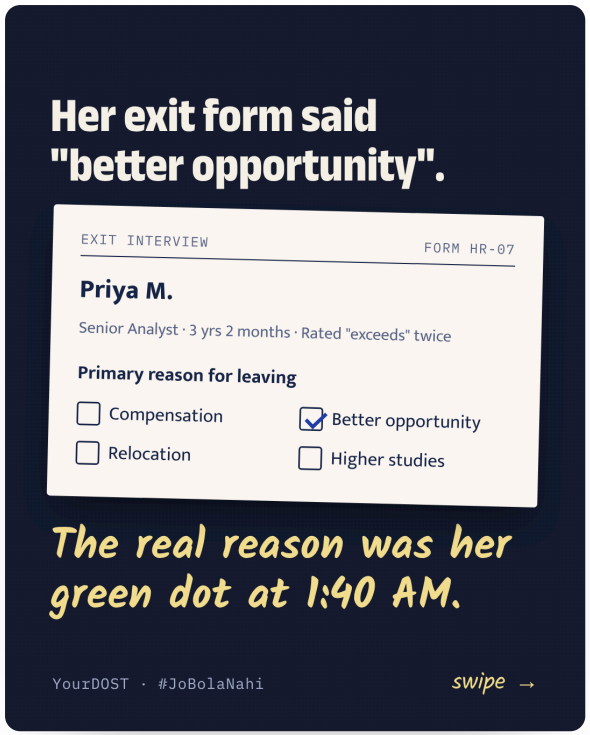

Why: Stories are where people answer honestly, because polls and sliders feel private. The answers become the next post, so the audience writes part of the content.

FOR	Employees, including the people at YourDOST's corporate clients
HOOK	"Good, you?" in a giant speech bubble, the office's universal reflex. The story goes up at exactly 6 PM on a Sunday, when the next frame's poll ("Sunday 6 PM feels like...") is true for whoever's reading.
ENGAGEMENT	Native poll, emoji slider, quiz and question-box stickers, the highest-engagement tools in Stories. The answers become the next post: "1,240 of you answered. Here's what you said" (with real numbers once they're in). Then Instagram content is built from the audience's own data.
CAPTION	Stories don't carry a caption. Frame 1 does the job, and the link sticker on frame 6 points to yourdost.com.

Exit form

HR leaders (B2B) · Carousel · 7 slides + LinkedIn · Tue 24 Nov, 10:00 AM

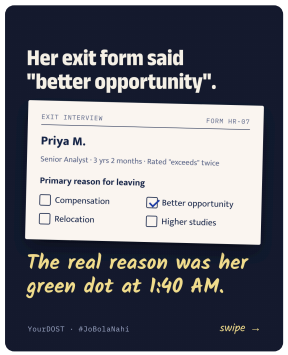

Her exit form said "better opportunity".

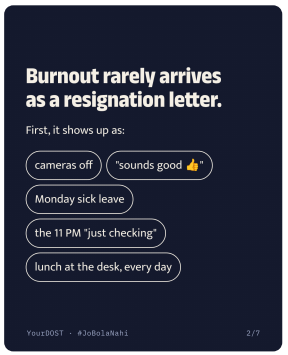

The real reason was her green dot at 1:40 AM.

Why: HR leaders buy EAPs, and they've all filed an exit form they didn't quite believe. Data on one slide, a free tip on another, then the demo ask, in that order.

FOR	HR leaders, CHROs and founders of 50–5,000-person companies: the people who buy EAPs
HOOK	A real-looking exit-interview form with "Better opportunity" ticked, then the handwritten truth under it. Every HR leader has filed that form and suspected it wasn't the whole story.
ENGAGEMENT	Save, then share to HR peers, then cross-post on LinkedIn. Slide 6 is useful even to someone who never buys, which builds trust before the "Book a demo" ask. Tagging "the leader who asks 'really'" spreads it inside companies.
CAPTION	Exit interviews are where the truth goes to be polite. If you lead a team, slide 6 costs nothing and works tomorrow. If you want a system behind it, YourDOST runs employee wellbeing and EAP programmes for 500+ organisations, with certified experts reachable in 30 seconds, in 20+ Indian languages.
